

Data System Reliability: New Standards, New Underlying Assumptions

EIA/TIA-942 promulgated new standards for data centers and changed how availability is calculated in data centers. These changes fundamentally change the conceptual designs of data centers and their equipments. This presentation summarizes the new standard, the changes to availability calculations, and the changes to the conceptual designs of data centers and their equipments so the requirements of this new standard are met.