

“One scientific epoch ended and another began with James Clerk MAXWELL. To few men in the world has such an experience been vouchsafed”

Albert Einstein

“There can be little doubt that the most significant event of the 19th century will be judged as Maxwell's discovery of the laws of electrodynamics. The American Civil War will pale into provincial insignificance in comparison with this important scientific event of the same decade”

Richard Feynman

The MAXWELL at GLENLAIR TRUST

(Registered Scottish Charity No. SC 030868)

A Charitable Trust has been established to conserve and preserve for the benefit of the public Glenlair House, the family home of James Clerk MAXWELL. The aim of the Trust is to put in hand works so as to stabilise the building known as Glenlair House, thereby guaranteeing as far as possible its continued existence and by so doing establish a permanent monument to the life of James Clerk MAXWELL.

Charitable donations are invited from individuals, institutions and societies with an interest in retaining for posterity the house where MAXWELL returned every summer for holiday fun and adventures as a child, for “anchoring” as a teenager, for refreshment as a professor, and to recollect and centre his private universe while he was deciphering the invisible universe with his formidable mathematical thought.
