“What I did while not being on holiday: what went to plan, and what didn’t”

Duncan Hall will talk about various personal adventures in career planning and in having benefited from serendipitous opportunities. Contexts for these adventures range from the ancient epoch of expecting a 40-year employment career, to the contemporary gig economy. He’ll highlight some lessons learned along the way, some frameworks he found useful for decision-making, and he’ll highlight some helpful heuristics.

The speaker: Duncan Hall's current job title is Strategy and Planning Manager. He works in the Information Management Division of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Trade. He's had a forty year career in professional engineering and management, in both the public and private sectors. He's worked in ICT, high-value management consulting, a global big science project, and for government agencies. He's also undertaken various volunteer activities for non-profit organisations.
