

Maxim Sokolov (IEEE member from the year 2000) was born in Leningrad in 1977. He graduated from Saint Petersburg State Electrotechnical University "LETI" in 1999 and earned PhD degree in 2002 from the same University.

He also pursued Executive Certificate from MIT Sloan School of Management in 2007.

Maxim is a Senior Research Scientist in the St. Petersburg research lab of Corning Incorporated. His current research interests are: scientific computing, pattern recognition and machine learning, swarm intelligence and bioinformatics. Before Corning he has been working as a software engineer in debis Systemhaus GmbH on e-commerce applications and joint projects with SAP AG.

Maxim has been elected to the grade of Senior Member in 2007. He serves as IEEE Russia Northwest Section Secretary and Computer/Engineering Management Joint Chapter Vice-Chairman starting 2005. He was actively involved in the organization of IEEE Eurocon 2009 conference, which has been held in St. Petersburg.