June Survey

IEEE Societies focus on specialized areas of interest. So, what is your primary reason for joining an IEEE Society?

Other (please specify)

Trying to influence the Society's end mission towards the use of technology as an effective tool for the solution of the most critical problems of our society rather than towards the mere advancement of the state of the art.

IEEE publications are a great way to stay "current" in our profession

Keep up to date with latest technology

Access to information I wouldnt otherwise find

And also for technical content, confenence, more chances of exchanging, etc..

Volunteering is also of them but volunteering can be done being IEEE member only but my major reason for joining society is technical things.

Also to seek the possibility of securing jobs through IEEE.

Technical content and Networking are equally important.

Access to the magazine(s)/information.

I would have checked more of the above if the survey had allowed it.

Publications related to my interest.

Am trying to develop Technical Writing skills. Also staying in touch at retirement after Technical career and engineering aide work.

Possible future profession

communicate to other people

IN ORDER TO IMPROVE MY TECHNICAL KNOWLEDGE AND STANDARDS.

So cheap as a student member

Technical Content and an attempt to not be such a geek... IEEE helps me connect with others than folks at work.
