SPC 2014 CALL FOR PAPERS

The IEEE Student Branch at the Tokyo Institute of Technology (IEEE Tokyo Tech) conducts a student paper contest (SPC) for postgraduate and undergraduate students of the Tokyo Tech. The IEEE Tokyo Tech SPC is aimed to challenge the knowledge and skills of English academic writing as well as scientific and technical excellence of the TokyoTech Students. It is required that the first author is a Tokyo Tech student. Papers must be written in English. Papers submitted for review to a journal or to a conference but not yet accepted in the journal or presented in the conference are eligible. The articles can be on any engineering subject in the field of interest of IEEE, including but not limited by the following:

- Circuit and Devices
- Communications Technology
- Electromagnetics and Radiation
- Computer
- Engineering and Human
- Energy and Power Engineering
- Signal and Applications
- Systems and Control
- Industrial Applications

The detailed description of the fields of interest can be found in the IEEE Technical Societies web site:

<http://www.ieee.org/organizations/society/index.html>

Submission Procedures

Prospective authors are invited to propose papers in any of the technical areas listed above. The number of authors for one paper is limited to 3. The first author has to be a student. Four Copies of the paper should arrive to the IEEE Tokyo Tech SPC Committee Chair.
