

Scenes from the 2001 IEEE International Symposium on EMC, Montréal, Canada, August 13-17

Photo by Shmuel

Glen Watkins of ETS-Lindgren attended the Exhibitor's Breakfast in Montréal and addressed exhibitor concerns regarding commercialism at the Symposium. Listening from the dias are (from left) Janet O'Neil, EMC Society Exhibitor Liaison, Richard Duhamel with Tektronix Canada and the Montréal Symposium Committee member who handled exhibits, and Dev Sharma, Director of Sales - International Conferences for JPdL Destination Management.

Photo by Janet O'Neil

Several members of the Montréal Symposium Steering Committee attended the Awards Luncheon on the Thursday afternoon of the Symposium week, including (from left) Christian Forget of the Centre de Recherche Industrielle du Québec who handled Registration, the legendary Stan Kubina who served as an Advisor (Stan has been active in the EMC Society for decades), and Benoît Nadeau of Matrox, Symposium Chairman.

Don Sheperd, President of Amplifier Research (AR), is shown at left congratulating Mark Nave of Network Appliance. Mark won the drawing held by AR for a grand entertainment system.

Photo by Dick Ford

Photo by Dick Ford

Des Georgalos of Alliance Components and Bob Wersen of Panel Components Corporation were one of the many exhibitors that participated in the Montréal Symposium.

Photo by Dick Ford

It was a sell out crowd for the Wednesday evening gala during the Symposium week. The event was held at Windsor Station in downtown Montréal.

Photo by Janet O'Neil

The Chairman of the Montréal Symposium Steering Committee kept two little secrets from us all: he has two beautiful daughters! Benoît Nadeau is shown at the Wednesday evening reception with his daughters Magali (left) and Daphné.

Photo by Philippe Bisaillon

Entertainment provided by Acrobazia during the Wednesday evening gala was nothing short of spectacular. One could hear a pin drop during the difficult balancing acts performed by these two gentlemen.