

Photo by Janet O'Neil

NIST in Boulder, Colorado is celebrating their 100th year as a standards and technology institution. Contributing to the Institute's noted reputation for excellence are, from left, Chris Holloway, Perry Wilson, Dennis Friday (Chief of the Radio-Frequency Technology Division) and John Ladbury.

Photo by Janet O'Neil

Dave Staggs of Dell Computer and his wife Barbara were quite the elegant couple at the dB Society party. Dave is Vice-President of the dB Society.

Photo by Janet O'Neil

Dr. Nigel Carter of QinetiQ (right) traveled from the United Kingdom to staff his company's booth during the Montréal Symposium. Graeme Eastwood assisted him with his duties.

Photo by Janet O'Neil

Jerry Meyerhoff and John Koklys of Motorola and Chuck Blabunka of Hitachi, (from left) share an interest in automotive EMC and actually managed to "talk-shop" before the Symposium week got into full swing.

Photo by Janet O'Neil

Steve King of Holaday Industries presented an impressive display of probes as a Montréal Symposium exhibitor.

Photo by Janet O'Neil

Tom Schneider of Retlif Testing Laboratories enjoyed the steady booth traffic during the Montréal Symposium.

Photo by Janet O'Neil

Not everyone in Montréal was serenaded during dinner with some wonderful French music. Art Wall of the FCC and his wife Hanna thoroughly enjoyed the strains of "Alouette." Nice shirt Art!