

Scenes from the 2006 IEEE International Symposium on EMC

NIST sent several engineers to Portland including (from left) Bob Johnk, John Ladbury, Perry Wilson, and Dennis Friday.

Mike Caruso of ETS-Lindgren (far left) and Dan Hoolihan of Hoolihan EMC Consulting (far right) welcomed new comers to the EMC Symposium, Darrin Kopala, Duane Wingate and Cliff Smith (from left) of Ingenium Technologies.

It's a gathering of the EMI/EMC IC experts in Portland, including (from left) Dale Sanders and Jim Muccioli of X2Y Attenuators, Terry North of DaimlerChrysler, Kevin Slattery and Harry Skinner of Intel, and Ross Carlton of Freescale.

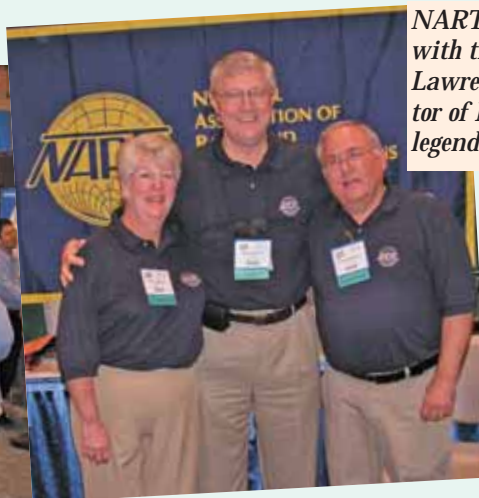

Sungtek Kahng of the University of Incheon in Korea and Matthias Hampe of the Helmut-Schmidt University in Germany, join Ed Nakauchi (from left) on the exhibition floor.

PHOTOS BY JANET ONEIL UNLESS OTHERWISE NOTED

NEC had a nice booth in Portland and friendly personnel, including Yoshi Fukawa of TechDream, with Akira Wakui and Masumi Kimura of NEC (from left).

NARTE's booth in Portland was new this year with the addition of Kathy and Brian Lawrence. Brian is the new Executive Director of NARTE and is shown with NARTE's legendary Russ Carstensen (right).

Mark Steffka of GM, John Maas of IBM, and Kimball Williams of Denso International America (from left) enjoyed socializing in Portland.

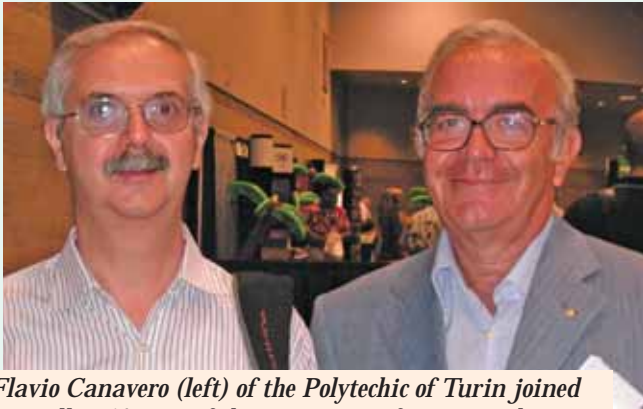

Cliff Carroll of ANDRO Computational Solutions, Jerry Itzenheiser of GE Health Care, Mike Hatfield of the Navy Dahlgren and Mike Egan of ETS-Lindgren (from left) caught up in Portland.

PHOTO BY KEN WYATT

Todd Hubing of Clemson University (center left) and Jim Blaha of LS Research joined the Hawaiians in the EMC 2007 booth in Portland to promote next year's symposium.

Flavio Canavero (left) of the Polytechnic of Turin joined Marcello D'Amore of the University of Rome on the exhibit floor in Portland.

Lexmark sent Rob Oglesbee (left) and C.T. White to staff their booth at the Portland Symposium.

Kurt and Suman Fischer enjoyed the dB Society annual picnic in Portland. Kurt recently joined NIST.

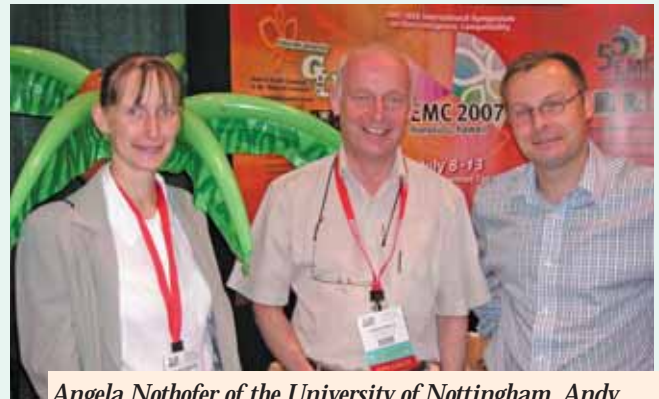

EMC Symposium attendees included Bob Dockey of Philips Medical Systems, Mark Montrose of Montrose Compliance Services, and Ken Wyatt of Agilent (from left).

Jim McCord (left) and Mark Heerema of Agilent cheerfully did booth duty in Portland.

Zeland Software's Joshua Wan (left) and Jian Zheng were happy to show their EM software and design automation tools at their booth in Portland.

Angela Nothofer of the University of Nottingham, Andy Marvin of the University of York, and David Johns of Flometrics (from left) visited during the Portland symposium.

Kerby Gove (left) demonstrates the blazing speed of Rohde & Schwarz's newest EMI test receiver, the R&S ESU, to Phil Dew of Delta Technical Sales during the symposium exhibition.

Kerri Fabin and Tom Kraehling welcomed all to their booth in Portland.

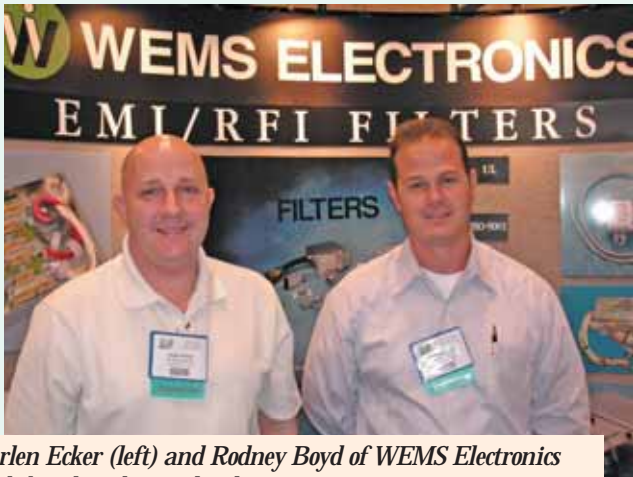

Eddie Pavlu of Elliott Labs enjoyed booth duty in Portland.

Nick Grilliot (center) is "cornered" in the AR Worldwide booth by the popular brothers Doug (left) and Ken Shepherd.

HV Technologies had a well-staffed booth in Portland with President Leo Makowski (center) greeting Brandt Langer of World Cal (left) and Doug Parker of Liberty Labs.

Arlen Ecker (left) and Rodney Boyd of WEMS Electronics exhibited at the Portland symposium.

Longtime friends Bob Goldblum (left) of ROBAR Industries and Ernie Magyar of Magyar Associates renewed acquaintances in Portland.

Jack Black (left) and Bill Stumpf had a good time in the DLS Electronics booth in Portland.

Irina Kasperovich (left) and Tammy Cox did a good job manning the ANDRO Computational Solutions booth.

The business card of Fabian Kutenkeuler of Würth Electronics indicates you can reach him toll free at 866-EMC-MORE.

The IBM booth attracted many well-known EMC engineers, including (from left) Kwok Soohoo of IBM, Gene Garat of Moss Bay EDA, Al Rhueli and Sam Conner of IBM, and Michael Cracraft of the University of Missouri at Rolla.

Taiyo Yuden sent their best and brightest to Portland, including (from left) Hiro Shigemoto, Satoshi Kazama, and Yaeko Minamikawa.

PHOTO BY KEN WYATT

Ray Adams of Fischer Custom Communications (left) and Daryl Gerke of Kimmel Gerke Associates shared a lighter moment on the exhibit floor in Portland.

PHOTO BY KEN WYATT

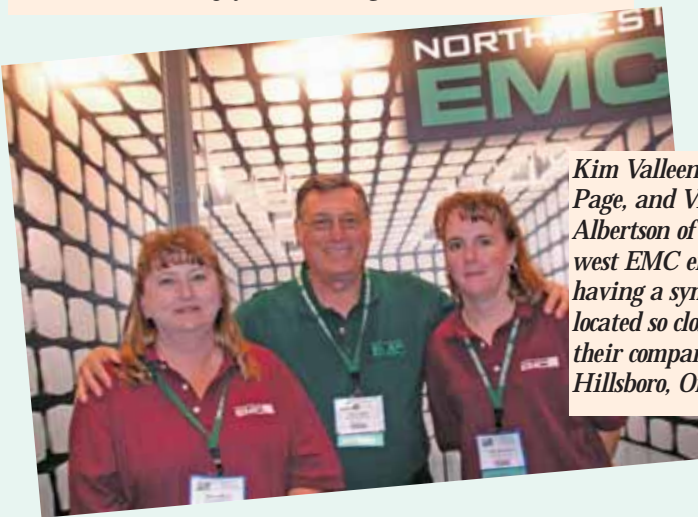

Jackie Benitez received a certificate of recognition from EMC Society President Andy Drozd for her role as the chair of the hospitality and companion program.

Ken Hall of Hewlett Packard, Francesca Maradei of the University of Rome, "La Sapienza," and Chris Holloway of NIST (from left), enjoyed socializing in Portland.

Bob Carter (left) and John Andresakis of OAK-MITSUI Technologies greeted an EMC Newsletter "Practical Paper" author, Jun Fan, of Teradata/NCR (right) at their booth in Portland.

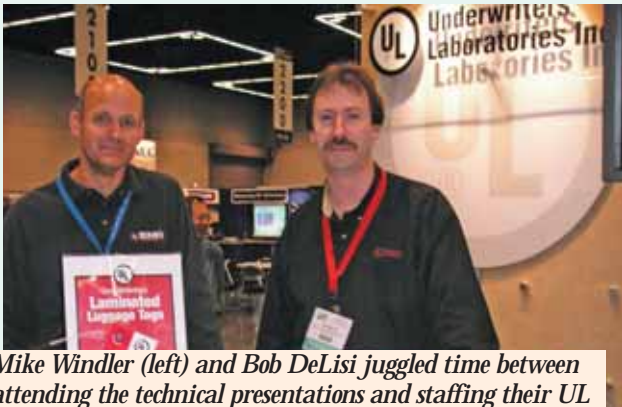

Kim Valleen, Jerry Page, and Vicki Albertson of Northwest EMC enjoyed having a symposium located so close to their company in Hillsboro, Oregon.

Ron Brewer of NASA/Analex gives a presentation during one of the technical sessions.

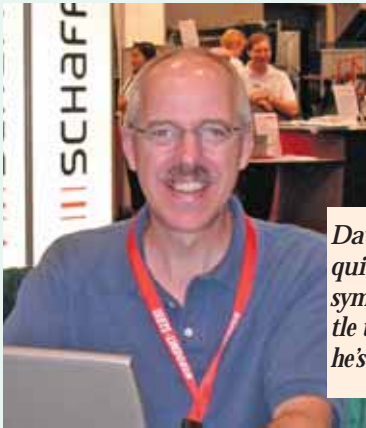

Mack Davis of G-MAG took a well-deserved break in his booth during the symposium exhibition in Portland.

Mike Windler (left) and Bob DeLisi juggled time between attending the technical presentations and staffing their UL booth during the symposium in Portland.

Dean Ghizzone of Northwest EMC (left) and Paul Slavens of Philips Medical Systems visit during a social event in Portland.

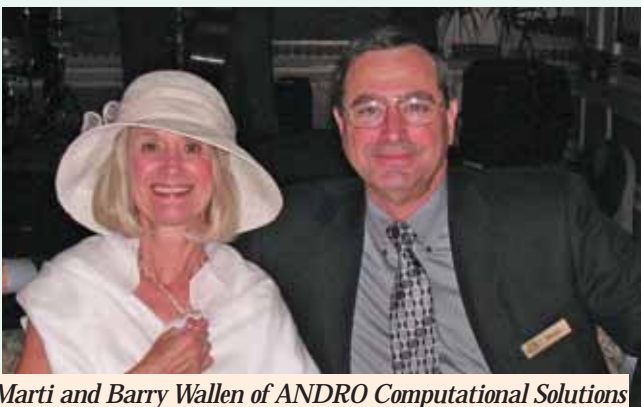

Having a ball in Portland are members of the EMC 2007 committee, including Mary Ellen and Jim Blaha (at rear), Dave Staggs (left), and Dan Hoolihan.

Dave Walen of the FAA had a quick commute to this year's symposium driving from Seattle to Portland. No wonder he's so happy!

The Milmega booth was a nice gathering spot in Portland for (from left) Bob Jenkins of Welch-Allyn, Sean Emerson, and Pat Moore with Dominic FitzPatrick of Milmega.

Marti and Barry Wallen of ANDRO Computational Solutions enjoy a nice dinner out on the town in Portland.

Ryan Bares (left) and Chris Faust of Haefely participated in the symposium exhibition.