

Geometric-Topological Aspects of Motion Planning

Robert Ghrist

University of Pennsylvania

Motion planning can be addressed by a wealth of mathematical tools. While combinatorial, algebraic-geometric, and probabilistic methods have a rich history of applications; there are other branches of relevant methods. This talk focuses on topological and geometric aspects, with an eye to configuration spaces and the role of curvature bounds.